Most of us no longer use hard-to-apply furniture wax, but rely on oil-based polish to keep furniture protected and shiny.

Silicone oil, found in most commercial polishes and sprays can penetrate tiny cracks in furniture finish and enter the wood, causing problems in the event refinishing is needed. To avoid such problems, use home made products.

Mix in a sprayer bottle. Shake well and apply a small amount to a flannel cleaning rag or cleaning cloth. Spread evenly over furniture surface. Turn cloth to a dry side and polish dry.

Lemon juice dissolves dirt and smudges, while olive oil shines and protects the wood.
